

Trotter Named Permanent Engineer

.... See Page 11

Impact Aid For Schools May End

.... See Page 2

Kevin Loder Awaits Word From Draft

.... See Page 7

ALABAMA JOURNAL

3rd Year—No. 113

A Multimedia Newspaper

Montgomery, Ala., 36192

Tuesday Afternoon, June 9, 1981

20 Pages

25*

Editor's Note:

Some of the material in this issue may be offensive to some readers.

Monday morning, a New York Superior Court Judge sentenced Frank Terpil and Gary Korkala to 10 years in the state penitentiary for conspiracy to sell 10,000 machine guns; sale of 10,000 machine guns; possession and sale of a .22-caliber fully silenced automatic pistol; possession and sale of a fully silenced .22-caliber rifle with a laser sight; and possession of, with intent to use, explosives.

passing sentence, the judge said, "These men should not be in prison one minute before the maximum term of their sen-two men were tried and convicted in absentia.

Sept. 3, 1980, the day before the trial was to begin, Terpil fled to Libya, from where he told his attorneys would have to go to the Libyan dictator Moammar Qaddafi to extradite him.

expedited American Extradition receipts, authorities have learned that Korkala is at the Haus Hotel in Beirut, a headquarters for the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Attorney Matthew Crosson says he thinks the men eventually will be caught and returned to the United States to serve their sen-was an aide to Idi Amin, the late Ugandan "butcher of Kampala" and has ties to the German

Thomas Krebs

Terrorism: Alabamians Help Convict Suppliers

By RHODES JOHNSTON

The suspicions of two Alabama investigators led to the conviction of two of the most notorious 20th Century outlaw gunrunners and terrorist suppliers.

The story began in Fort Payne in September 1979. State Trooper Lt. L.N. Hagan and Sgt. Don Trimm of the Birmingham Police Department, officers assigned to the Leviticus Project investigation of New York broker Bill Nardone's sale of limited partnerships in Alabama coalfields, were questioning George Hambert in the Fort Payne jail.

Hambert, a local contract miner and president of Cherokee Mining and Energy, a Nardone subcontractor, had been charged with issuing bad checks. Nardone, in turn, had charged that Hambert was embezzling money from him.

While the interrogation was under way, Nardone and his attorney, Stephen Sacks, showed up at the jail.

"I got suspicious about this attorney," said Hagan. "He was running his mouth too much."

"He told us how professional the Leviticus investigators were and was throwing off on the FBI and the sheriff's office."

"I mentioned an informant had told us (there was) a connection with the Columbo (Mafia) family."

"Nardone nearly fell against the wall, but Sacks said he did have a connection and implied he was a Mafia attorney."

"Nobody will talk to a lawman like that, especially an attorney. I thought he was a con-man."

The officer relayed his suspicions to Thomas Krebs, Alabama Securities Commission director and Leviticus head. Krebs, in turn, put in a call to the New York City District Attorney's Office.

"If your mother tells you she loves you, check it out," Krebs said in an interview last week. "I tell all my men that."

Yes, they knew Stephen Sacks. He had recently defended New York mobster Carmine Galante in a corruption case. They agreed to check further.

As it turned out, there were three attorneys named Stephen Sacks from New York. Two had recently moved to the Washington, D.C., area. Their credentials were valid.

The third Stephen Sacks had claimed to be a federal prosecutor in Pennsylvania, but a call to the

(See TERRORISM Page 2)

Israelis Laud, Outsiders Denounce Raid In Iraq

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli newspapers rang with praise today for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's decision to bomb an Iraqi nuclear reactor, and the voters who will decide his political fate June 30 seemed pleased with the daring raid.

"Israel acted according to an old rule, hit them before they hit you," the conservative daily Maariv said in an editorial. The newspaper said Israel had a "complete right to act

Cease-Fire Silences Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Most guns fell silent in Beirut, around Zahle and in the strategic central mountains today, hours after Arab League mediators announced a cease-fire commitment from the warring Syrians and Lebanese Christians.

A police spokesman said sniper fire kept the major crossing points between Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors closed to traffic but reported no artillery or rocket exchanges along the mid-city demarcation line.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Patti Davis and her father, President Reagan, have "agreed to disagree" about nuclear energy, but Miss Davis says her decision to speak at an anti-nuclear program Sunday "is not something he's happy with."

The actress and singer, speaking at a news conference Monday, said she will address a fund-raising benefit in Los Angeles.

Her immediate concern, Miss Davis said, is Pacific Gas and Electric Co.'s attempt to secure a temporary test license for two nuclear power plants, one in Diablo Canyon and one near San Luis Obispo.

"I feel I'm speaking out as an American citizen who sees something happening in this country that frightens me," Miss Davis said.

Bess Has Problems

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former first lady Bess Truman was still experiencing problems swallowing today, and doctors for the 96-year-old widow of President Harry S. Truman continued to feed her intravenously.

Mrs. Truman has been able to eat some soft foods, longtime family physician Wallace Graham said. He said she felt "particularly good" Monday because she had her hair done.

"I told her she looked pretty and asked if she would like to dance. Her response was laughter," Graham said.

Mrs. Truman has been hospitalized since breaking a hip in a fall at her Independence, Mo., home May 6.

Zone Forecasts

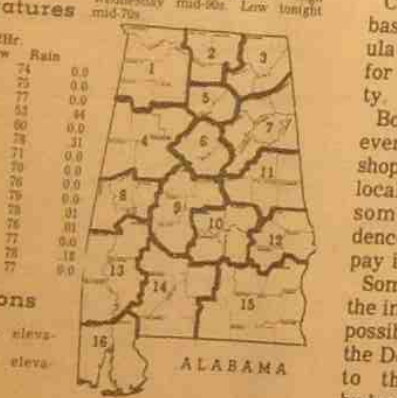

All Zones: Fair, warm and humid tonight, partly cloudy with a slight chance of thundershowers Wednesday, southwesterly winds 4 to 8 mph tonight.

Zones 1, 2, 3 and 5: Low tonight low 70s. High Wednesday low 90s. Probability of rain Wednesday 20 percent.

Zones 4, 6 and 7: High Wednesday mid-90s. Low tonight mid-70s. Probability of rain Wednesday 20 percent.

Zones 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12: High Wednesday mid-90s. Low tonight mid-70s.

Zones 13, 14 and 15: High Wednesday mid-90s. Low tonight mid-70s.

which came into the system this year.

Huntsville, where Marshall Space Flight Center is located, would be hardest hit, losing about $1.7 million.

In Alabama, impact aid now goes to 93 school districts in almost every county.

In an attempt to save the impact aid program, schools in at least four states are threatening to charge tuition for teaching children from military families or to deny them access to public schools.

"It has always been our policy to take the children who come to us," said Bobo. "I've heard talk of it (tuition charges) in other states, but I have not thought of it."

In Montgomery, school superintendent Henry Adair said, "I think we'd have to treat all the boys and girls alike." He rejected the idea of tuition charges, saying, "I hope some alternative can be found."

Impact aid confrontations are brewing in Virginia, North Carolina, New York and Nebraska where school districts have vowed to charge tuition to children of military personnel. Depending on the outcome of legal skirmishes there, other states are prepared to impose tuition, said James Maza, director of the National Association of Federally Impacted Schools.

So far, the Reagan administration shows no signs of backing down. And in the Democratic-controlled Education and Labor Committee, a caucus of members last week indicated they are reluctantly preparing to jettison the impact aid program to salvage other federal aid seen as more important to education.

The education committee has been instructed — under terms of the budget resolution approved last month by Congress — to cut $12 billion from the $41 billion already authorized for education.

Impact aid — a 30-year-old program — has been a target of every president since Dwight Eisenhower. Critics complain the program indiscriminately gives money to rich districts as well as poor.

Critics also claim that military bases and federal installations stimulate business activity, making up for taxes not paid on federal property.

Bobo and Morgan pointed out, however, that military families often shop at a commissary rather than local stores. And federal workers sometimes maintain legal residences in other states where they pay income tax.

Some school administrators hope the impact aid program will survive, possibly by being transferred from the Department of Education budget to the Department of Defense budget.

allegedly cost federal and state governments billions more.

Nardone, Ms. Verbell, Suslak and Bush were accused of swindling 68 investors out of more than $3 million in cash or promissory notes. The victims, most of them doctors, lawyers, accountants and business executives, were allegedly persuaded to buy shares in three New York limited partnerships having the stated purpose of mining coal in Alabama and Georgia.

Prosecutors here said that while the victims were told their investment would help alleviate the nation's energy crisis, the cash and notes went not for coal, but into the accused swindlers' pockets.

Henry Fonda

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Henry Fonda will "continue his recuperation for awhile anyway" after being released from a hospital where he underwent diagnostic heart surgery, the actor's publicist, Ray Strickland, says.

Fonda, who had a heart pacemaker implanted in 1974, was admitted May 4 and celebrated his 76th birthday in the hospital May 15.

OVER THE COUNTER SECURITIES

NASDAQ quotations indicate highest bids and lowest offers from market makers in each security as of 3:00 p.m. Local OTC quotations (*) indicate inter-dealer prices from a market maker in each security as of approximately 3:00 p.m. (+) Listed Pacific Coast Exchange. Quotations do not include retail mark-up, mark-down or commission.

Symbol	BID	ASK
BANKS
Central Bankshares of the South	11 1/4	11 1/2
Citizens and Southern Bank GA	8 1/4	8 1/2
(*) Exchange National Bank	10	10 1/2
First Alabama Bankshares	29	29 1/2
First Bank Group Alabama	29	29 1/2
(*) First Montgomery Bank	19 1/4	19 1/2
Southern Bancorporation	13 1/4	13 1/2
(*) Union Bank & Trust Co.	13 1/4	13 1/2
INDUSTRIALS
Associated Coca Cola	40 1/4	41
Amarco Common	5 1/4	5 1/2
Amarco Warrants	1 1/4	1 1/2
Bruno's	1 1/4	1 1/2
Calgon Petroleum	18 1/4	18 1/2
(+) Canada Southern Pet	12 1/4	12 1/2
Cencor Corp.	10 1/4	10 1/2
Children's World	10 1/4	10 1/2
Compass	5 1/4	5 1/2
C.P. Bachab	3 1/4	3 1/2
Debeers	12 1/4	12 1/2
Dorr Filler	7 1/4	7 1/2
F.S.C. Corp.	18 1/4	18 1/2
F.S.C. Corp. Preferred	2 1/4	2 1/2
General Aircraft	8 1/4	8 1/2
Impala	1 1/4	1 1/2
IMS Intl.	2 1/4	2 1/2
Intermedics	23 1/4	24
International Picture Show	3 1/4	3 1/2
Kimball	7 1/4	7 1/2
Kinder Care	21 1/4	22
KinderCare Bonds	16	16 1/2
Lance	8 1/4	8 1/2
Louisiana Land Offshore	23 1/4	24
MCI Communication	10	10 1/2
Microform	23 1/4	23 1/2
Multimedia	4 1/4	4 1/2
Morrison	35	35 1/2
Nobility Homes	11 1/4	11 1/2
Ohio Ferro	7 1/4	7 1/2
Penn Pacific	16 1/4	17
Petroleum Development	17 1/4	17 1/2
Powell Industries	5 1/4	5 1/2
Roadway Express	5 1/4	5 1/2
Service Merchandise	48 1/4	48 1/2
Shoney's Inc.	12	12 1/2
Standard Micro Systems	18 1/4	18 1/2
H.J. Wilson	10 1/4	10 1/2
INSURANCE COMPANIES
Federated Guaranty Life	10	10 1/2
Mutual Savings of Decatur	25	25 1/2
National Security Insurance	10	10 1/2
Palmetto Savings & Loan	11 1/4	11 1/2
Protective Life	24	24 1/2
Southern Financial	21 1/4	21 1/2
Southern United Life	4 1/4	4 1/2

craft missiles into Lebanon's Bekaa Valley near Zahle on April 29 after Israeli planes shot down two Syrian helicopters operating against the Christians. Israel said its air force will blow up the missiles if the Syrians don't remove them, but the Syrians refuse to pull them out.

Syria has kept 22,000 troops in Lebanon since the civil war to police the armistice between the Christians and the Moslems. The Christians contend that the Syrian troops are an army of occupation and Syria wants to annex Lebanon.

They start a little fire on top of the pot. The top of the pot, and the copper starts getting hot from the top down.

"The rat goes crazy. There's only one way out."

Rodriguez: "Through the stomach, oh, my God."

Terpil: "And he feels every thing."

Rodriguez: "And he's eating, right?"

Terpil: "No, he can see it, he can see it."

Rodriguez: "You can see it?"

Terpil: "Oh, I mean you can't see. But you can see once it's in your stomach 'cause it keeps on going through. It keeps on going through. It doesn't stop."

Rodriguez: "If he talks, they take the rat off, or they just let the rat keep eating?"

Terpil: "Even if he talks."

"Yeah, very effective, I admit I've seen it, I've seen that done about three times, totally effective."

Later Terpil and Rodriguez discuss a variation of the rat torture using a pyrex bowl on the victim's genitals.

TOMORROW: How Do You Buy Weapons?

Terrorism

Leviticus office in Pennsylvania revealed no prosecutor named Stephen Sacks.

Then one of the officers remembered that the Pennsylvania attorney general had made three securities fraud cases against a Stephen Sacks. Assistant New York Attorney General Matthew Crosson, who was prosecuting the Nardone case for Leviticus, decided to ask the grand jury for an indictment against Sacks for practicing law without a license at the same time he asked for the Nardone indictment.

On Oct. 16, 1979, a month after Alabama officials first became suspicious, the indictment was returned. Sacks showed up at Crosson's Manhattan office to find out what had happened to his client, Nardone. Crosson recalled that scene in a recent interview. He told Sacks that his client had been indicted and then added, "We have an indictment against you. At this moment a search warrant is being executed at your office."

"He didn't bat an eyelash throughout the conversation," said Crosson. "He acted very cool."

The indictment meant Sacks' underworld clients could no longer claim the attorney-client privilege for their communications with him, and soon Crosson's office began getting calls from underworld figures saying any conversations they had with Sacks were protected, because they thought he was a lawyer when they were dealing with him.

Sacks was turned over to a New York detective for booking, the very detective he had been grilling on the witness stand a week earlier, when he was practicing law.

According to Krebs, the detective, a sometime Leviticus investigator, leaned over to Sacks and said, "Hey, Stevie, when you get down to Rikers (prison), the mob is going to kill you."

At that point Sacks decided to cooperate with Leviticus investigators and agreed to introduce undercover agents to his friend, Frank Terpil. On Dec. 20, 1979, four men are announced that they had arrested Sacks.

On Oct. 16, 1979, a month after Alabama officials first became suspicious, the indictment was returned. Sacks showed up at Crosson's Manhattan office to find out what had happened to his client, Nardone. Crosson recalled that scene in a recent interview. He told Sacks that his client had been indicted and then added, "We have an indictment against you. At this moment a search warrant is being executed at your office."

"He didn't bat an eyelash throughout the conversation," said Crosson. "He acted very cool."

The indictment meant Sacks' underworld clients could no longer claim the attorney-client privilege for their communications with him, and soon Crosson's office began getting calls from underworld figures saying any conversations they had with Sacks were protected, because they thought he was a lawyer when they were dealing with him.

Sacks was turned over to a New York detective for booking, the very detective he had been grilling on the witness stand a week earlier, when he was practicing law.

According to Krebs, the detective, a sometime Leviticus investigator, leaned over to Sacks and said, "Hey, Stevie, when you get down to Rikers (prison), the mob is going to kill you."

At that point Sacks decided to cooperate with Leviticus investigators and agreed to introduce undercover agents to his friend, Frank Terpil. On Dec. 20, 1979, four men are

Ann Odre

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Doctors may have to operate again on Ann Odre, the Buffalo resident who was shot in St. Peter's Square at the same time as Pope John Paul II, her attending physician says.

Dr. Joseph Kunz said Monday at Buffalo General Hospital the 58-year-old widow has an infection, caused by a bullet wound, in the upper left part of the abdomen. Doctors will decide within a week whether further surgery is required, Kunz said.

Mrs. Odre, now in fair and stable condition, underwent two operations in Rome and returned to Buffalo last week.

Suspect To Be Tested

BRIDGETON, N.J. (AP) — A Vineland, N.J., man who allegedly was prepared to assassinate Gov. Brendan T. Byrne "on the say-so of the Secret Service" has been ordered to undergo psychiatric testing.

John Starns, 26, was arrested Friday by Vineland detectives, who had been alerted by the Secret Service. Starns allegedly contacted the Secret Service Thursday and told agents he wanted to work undercover with them to help eradicate organized crime, local police said.

Starns allegedly had a list of people he said he was willing to assassinate if the Secret Service gave him its permission. Byrne was included on this list, police said.

Vineland police confiscated a shotgun they said they believed Starns intended to use.